War Summary of The Latest Events

At the moment there seems to be a decided lull on most of the war fronts. There is much artillery firing, but there is not at any point an offensive of serious proportions, so far as Wednesday night's reports reveal the situation. Weather conditions on the West front have been unfavorable for observation, a fact which has limited activity. There is nothing of importance in the French night report, but the German report, perhaps with some exaggeration for home consumption, speaks of the French sending violent waves on the foe at one point. The French day report praises the work of the artillery in holding back the Germans along the Meuse. The Italian offensive has slowed down, but minor operations during the day have brought in 200 prisoners on the Carzano, while foe attacks on the Bain-sizza Plateau were repulsed.

Lack of detail in the British Admiralty reports regarding the sinking of ships by submarines and mines prevents any sweeping inferences, but the report for this week has at least one cheering feature. This is, that while the number of small boats sunk is larger than usual, the loss of vessels of over 1,600 tons is the smallest since the commencement of the German intensive submarine campaign. The total tonnage lost is not given, but the result, coupled with the recent news of the large steamer which, after two days' manoeuvring and fighting, escaped, gives ground for real encouragement. If the reported Edison invention for the deflecting of torpedoes can be proven successful and applied to the large steamers, the war will have been almost won, and the world will owe another great debt to this American genius.

There have been too many changes and discouragements of late in connection with the Russian situation to justify any cocksure prophesying, but

There have been too many changes
and discouragements of late in connection with the Russian situation to justify any cocksure prophesying, but
just now there is a rift in the clouds.
News received Wednesday from Petrograd by the Russian Ambassador at Washington contains a confident note.
It is the present belief of the Kerensky Government that they are top of the heap, and have the situation in control. During the last few days the military situation around Riga has improved, and the Russian Government believes that the Germans have shot their bolt, and that they have not the men nor resources to follow up their advantage there.

Signs accumulate that the German people become more and more weary,
and are longing for peace. The bravado of three years ago is giving place
to hopelessness and a knowledge that victory can never be theirs. Hard on the heels of General Smuts' declaration: "Can one doubt the growing feeling, the terror that possesses her
as she sees the nations range themselves side by side against her," come significant declarations from the German press. The question of peace is now conspicuous in their columns on the eve of the German reply to the Pope's appeal. The Deutsche Tages
Zeitung says that the German Government is reported to have abandoned
all idea of the control of Belgium,
while the Rhenische Westfalische Zeitung says the question of Belgium was up last week and certain conclusions reached. It is quite evident that the Hun is at last impressed by the storm of world-wide disapproval his acts have raised and is looking for a way out which will save his face.

HISTORICAL MEETINGS

The Historical Society is providing some rare treats for the people of Napanee and vicinity. Several eminent lecturers have been secured and this season's program promises to be the most attractive ever put forward by the Society.

Dr. Davidson, of Guelph, will present "A walk through London" on Friday, October 5th. Those who accompanied this learned lecturer last season in "A walk through Paris" will be delighted to learn that another beautifully illustrated travellor is in store for them two weeks from to-night.

Prof. J. I. Macdonald on November 9th will deliver his lecture "War Cartoons". Over seventy of the most famous war cartoons will be thrown upon the screen. This unique form of entertainment is both educative and amusing and is sure to please.

Prof. A. L. Clark will speak upon "Holland in War Time" on December 7th and will illustrate his address with numerous lantern slides obtained by himself upon the ground. We have been so intent upon following the bel- ligerents in the great struggle that we have quite over-looked the trials of this little Kingdom and it will be a treat to get an insight into Hol- land's relation to the warring coun- tries.

Further announcements will be made later respecting the program for the later part of the season. As these dates have to be fixed far in ad- vance and cannot conveniently be changed, other organizations contem- plating holding public meetings are respectfully requested to choose their dates so as not to conflict with these meetings. All of these lecturers will be delivered in the Society's hall over the Public Library. No admission fee is charged. Everyone is welcome and it is hoped that the citizens generally will show their appreciation of the efforts of the Society to provide for them such a first class series of lec- tures. Few towns are so privileged and the continuance of these courses depends entirely upon the reception that is given to the speakers who are good enough to give us the benefit of their travels, study and researches and often at great sacrifice to them- selves.

NEWBURGH

The annual meeting of the Red Cross Society was held on Wednesday even- ing of last week.

Mrs. J. Shane, an aged and respect- ed resident of this place, passed away on Sunday at the home of her daugh- ter, Mrs. John Samson. Her funeral on Tuesday to St. Luke's Church at Camden East, was largely attended.

ORNA IS A GEN'US

General Praised by Military Experts.

Kerensky Issued Proclamation Following Collapse of Rebellion Led by General Korniloff, and a Strong Cabinet Now Controls All the Affairs of State.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Italy continues to wage one of the most difficult campaigns in history, winning peak after peak of strongly-defended positions in regions hitherto considered impracticable for military operations.

The capture of Monte San Gabriele and the command of the Bainsizza and the Chiapovano valleys; over the last danger of an Austrian counter-offensive against Gorizia, with the expected capture of San Daniele, less than two miles further south, will open the road to the key to Vienna.

In three weeks the battle has been fought for this mountain, which lies in the path of any advance east from Gorizia. It is not its height of 2,140 feet that makes it so formidable—both Monte San Gabriele and Monte San Daniele are higher—but the almost perpendicular rocky face that the soldiers climb before attaining the top. Several times they reached the summit only to be beaten back.

And again they attacked, succeeding at a cost of life to life which the correspondents describe as the most frightful of the war. Comparing it to the Prussian slaughter at Verdun with the loss of the Crown Prince, the Italians have won. The main approach from the north, by Alpine troops, climbing over the front of Monte Santo, to the Dolomites. They spread out over the western and eastern slopes of Monte San Gabriele, which are less steep, and proceeded to climb the mountain face.

The Italian army succeeded in the most brilliant operation of the war. As General Cadorna's campaign develops military operations are more and more in line with his genius. He has cleared the Bainsizza in the north, driving the Austrians to the eastern edge. In the south he is slowly but surely entering the Hermada Mountain, bars the way to Trieste. Now, the capture of Monte San Gabriele, solidified his centre.

ILL-TREATING THE BELGIANS

Tentons Are Constructing New Defences at Zeebrugge.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 18.—Bombing attacks occur daily in North Flanders and along the coast. Bombs have been thrown on the Bruges railway front and the station at Donck with the object of rendering military work more difficult. The place of attack is a new aerodrome, which is likely to become the largest in Flanders. In the wooded region of Schreeve, between Donck and Moerkerke, many civilians are busy under the German lash. A gigantic fort has thus been prepared scarcely an hour's walk from the Dutch frontier. The whole neighborhood of civilians from Cele and other hamlets as far as Baalgerhoeve, must go south to work. The Germans are laying new works between Zeebrugge and Blankenberg whereon the civilians of Bruges are obliged to work. These works indicate a contradiction of the recent rumor that the Germans are likely to quickly surrender the coast. High officers frequently come to Bruges to inspect the works. The Heyst Knocke population has received instructions to hold mattresses at the disposal of the Germans. After plundering villas they are now beginning to use the homes of the settled population, whose life is already hard through lack of food, forced labor and the dangers of the occupied region.

Assistant Commissary Lejeune, of Liege, who was sentenced to death, has been shot, with other patriots, in a ditch at Chartreuse. Nothing is yet known of the fate of Burgomaster Hammon.

With reference to the escape of the Scaldis, a motor-boat with Belgians for the Belgian army, the Telegraaf learns that the Germans at Antwerp are furious, and have arrested the lock-keeper wherefrom the Scaldis departed; also friends of "Jof," the captain of the Scaldis.

MADE FALSE CHARGE.

Germans Admit That Relief Ships Are Not Used as Decoys.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—In response to Great Britain's protest against the charge that Belgian relief ships acted as decoys to trap submarines, the German Foreign Office has explained that the accusation was based upon the report of a submarine commander who said the Baron Baeyens, a relief steamer, turned toward him when sighted.

The German statement, forwarded to the British Embassy here, from London, says that the Baron Baeyens flew flags and pennants indicating her connection with Belgian relief and that the submarine commander had to conclude that in making use of the distinctive signs she was acting as a trap for submarines because "the steamer, on coming in sight, turned toward the submarine, and when the submarine abstained from attacking and went off, turned back again."

The British Government stated that the vessel in question had been continually in the service of Belgian relief and had been furnished with safe conducts for all her voyages. She displays by order all the distinctive markings in amplification of repeated assurances that relief vessels and markings will never be used for any purpose other than that for which they are intended.

NEW REPUBLIC FORMED

Russia Adopts Form of Popular Government.

His Recent Capture of Monte San Gabriele Was One of the Most Brilliant Operations of the War, and His Troops Are Crushing the Austrians.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 18.—A Russian republic has been proclaimed. The Provisional Government under date of September 14 issued a proclamation declaring that to strengthen the organization of the State a change to a republican form of government was necessary. Danger still threatens Russia, the proclamation says, although the rebellion of General Korniloff has failed. The plan of a Russian republic has been one of the chief aims of the Radicals and the Councils of Soldiers' and Workers' Delegates, and was given approval by the recent Russian congress at Moscow.

A Cabinet of five members, including Premier Kerensky, has been named to take care of all matters of State. The only party men are Premier Kerensky and M. Nikitine, Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, both of whom are Social Revolutionists. The others, including the Ministers of War and Marine, are members of no party.

Although the position of the Kerensky Government appears to be improving, the action of the Grand Council of the Don Cossacks in refusing to surrender General Kaledines, their hetman, is ominous. The leader of the Cossacks is accused of complicity in the Korniloff revolt. The Cossacks protest their loyalty to the Government, while ignoring the Government's request for the giving up of General Kaledines.

The surrender of General Korniloff took place without bloodshed, but only after prolonged negotiations, during the course of which a collision seemed inevitable. When the Governmental army, under Gen. Korotokoff, was marching from Orshal on Mohilev, Gen. Korniloff was negotiating with Gen. Alexieff, Chief of Staff, who had already reached Mohilev, but was unable to effect Korniloff's arrest owing to the fact that part of the local forces was emphatically for Korniloff and prepared to defend him to the last.

Korniloff and Lokomsky laid down conditions under which they were willing to surrender their swords, the nature of which has not yet been reported. Both showed considerable obstinacy and the negotiations broke

It is believed that these 25,000 will be under arms early in November. The remaining 75,000 men will be allowed to re- turn to their homes on leave of ab- sence. They will be called up in groups of 10,000 to 15,000 as they are required and as the supply of equipment and facilities for training permit.

Korniloff's arrest owing to the fact that part of the local forces was em- phatically for Korniloff and prepar- ed to defend him to the last.

Korniloff and Lokomsky laid down conditions under which they were willing to surrender their swords, the nature of which has not yet been reported. Both showed considerable obstinacy and the negotiations broke down.

Gen. Alexieff telegraphed to Pre- mier Kerensky a description of the position at Mohilev, expressing the opinion that a majority of the local troops were siding with Korniloff. Kerensky refused to countenance delay, and gave the order to General Alexieff to execute immediately the order of arrest, and, as Alexieff still hesitated to provoke a conflict, Ker- ensky telegraphed him that if Kornil- off was not surrendered within two hours he would conclude that Alex- ieff was Korniloff's prisoner, and would take other measures for the expulsion of the counter-revolution- ists from Mohilev.

In the meantime Government troops were being steadily concen- trated on Mohilev, capturing troops, among them Korniloff's orderly, and others who took prominent parts in the rebellion; members of the Union of the Officers of the Army and Fleet, and other prominent rebels.

Korniloff surrendered, apparently only when Gen. Korotokoff's forces were near Mohilev, and after the de- fection of his last supporting troops.

Gold in Barrels of Pork.

A GULF PORT, Sept. 18.—Cus- toms officials Saturday boarded a Spanish steamer here shortly before the vessel was scheduled to depart for an European port and seized $40,300 in gold secreted in a barrel of salt pork that formed a part of the ship's stores.

An investigation conducted by the Federal District Attorney was fol- lowed by the arrest of three members of the ship's crew, charged with vi- olatiing President Wilson's proclama- tion of September 10, prohibiting the exportation of gold save under li- cense.

Officials were inclined to the be- lief, they said, that the gold bears some relations to reports that Ger- many has received gold through com- munication of her submarines with neutral ships.

Buffalo Cadet Killed.

BORDEN CAMP, Sept. 18.—Flight Cadet Whetrick, of the 81st Squad- ron Royal Flying Corps, lies dead in the morgue as a result of a fatal crash of his machine some five miles east of camp on Saturday. The ac- cident happened under rather pecu- liar circumstances. Another machine had made a forced landing, and its pilot called out to Whetrick, who was not far away, to take word to the camp to send the repair truck. To hear better what was being said Whetrick shut off his engine and did not succeed in getting it going again to rise. His machine took a nose dive from about 150 feet and was badly smashed up. Whetrick was conscious when picked up, but died before reaching the hospital. He came from Buffalo, N.Y.

Kerensky Remarries.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 18.—Refu- gees from Petrograd arriving here Saturday bring the story that in the midst of the crisis, a few days after the fall of Riga to be exact, Ker- ensky found time to remarry. The wedding took place at the winter palace, the lady being Mile. Timmet, a prominent and clever young actress of the Alexandra Theatre. It is amusing to hear that this item of fashionable intelligence created an unfavorable impression in Petrograd.

The Thrill and the Hell of the Trenches, Described by an American Boy.

Sergeant Alexander McClintock of Lexington, Ky., and the Canadian Army Has Gripping Tale That Every American Will Read, For He Tells the Facts—Unadorned. Wounded, a Distinguished Conduct Medal Man, He Was Invalided Home, but Is Going "Out There" Again to Fight For Uncle Sam and His Allies. An Inspiring, Interesting, Personal Narrative, Full of the Spirit and Atmosphere of the Trenches.

No. 3. "Over the Top and Give 'Em Hell!"

By Sergeant Alexander McClintock, D. C. M., 87th Overseas Batt., Canadian Gren. Guards.

Copyright, 1917, by the Bell Syndicate, Inc.

Sergeant McClintock, who has seen service in France, was decorated for bravery, wounded, invalided home and is now endeavoring to get a commission in our army. A commission in the Canadian army awaits him if he returns to join his old command. In the first and second articles he graphically describes his training, his trip to France and the elaborate preparations made for a bomb raid on the German trenches.

AS we climbed out of the shelter of our trenches for my first—and, perhaps, my last, I thought—adventure in No Man's Land the word was passed:

"Over the top and give 'em hell!"

That is the British Tommies' battle cry as they charge the enemy, and it has often sounded up and down those long lines in western France as the British, Canadian and Australian soldiers go out to the fight and the death.

We were divided into six parties of ten men, each party having separate duties to perform. We crouched forward, moving slowly in single file, stumbling into shell holes and over dead men—some very long dead—and managing to keep in touch with each other though the machine gun bullets began to drop men almost immediately. Once we were started we were neither fearful nor rattled. We had been drilled so long and so carefully that each man knew just what he was to do, and he kept right on doing it unless he got hit. To me it seemed the ground was moving back under me. The first ten yards were the toughest. The thing was perfectly organized. Our first party of ten was composed of signallers. They were paying out wires and carrying telephones to be used during the fifteen minutes in communicating with our battalion headquarters. A telephone code had been arranged, using the names of our commanding officers as symbols. "Rexford 1" meant "First prisoners being sent back;" "Rexford 2" meant "Our first wounded being sent over;" "Rexford 3" meant "We have entered German trench." The code was very complete, and the signallers had been drilled in it for a week. In case the telephone wires were cut, the signallers were to send messages back by the use of rifle grenades. These are rifle projectiles which carry little metal cylinders to contain written messages and which burst into flame when they strike the earth, so that they can be easily found at night. The officer in charge of the signallers was to remain at the point of entrance, with his eyes on his watch. It was his duty to sound a warning signal five minutes before the end of our time in the German trenches.

The leader of every party of ten also had a whistle with which to repeat the warning blast and then the final blast, when each man was to drop everything and get back of our artillery fire. We were not to leave any dead or wounded in the German trench on account of the information which the Germans might thus obtain. Before starting on the raid we had removed all marks from our persons, including even our identification disks. Except for the signallers, each party of ten was similarly organized. First, there were two bayonet men, each with an electric flashlight attached to his rifle, so as to give light for the direction of a bayonet thrust and controlled by a button at the left hand grasp of the rifle. Besides his rifle, all of these men carried six or eight Mills No. 5 hand grenades, weighing from a pound and five ounces to a pound and seven ounces each.

The Lineup.

They are the same shape as a turkey egg and a little larger. Upon withdrawing the firing pin a lever sets a four second fuse going. One of these grenades will clean out anything living in a ten foot trench section. It will also kill the man who is throwing it if he holds it more than four seconds after he has pulled the pin. The third man of each ten was an expert bomb thrower, equipped as lightly as possible to give him freedom of action. He carried a few bombs himself, but the main supply was carried by the fourth man, who was not to throw any unless the third man became a casualty, in which case No. 4 was to take his place. The third man also carried a knob kerrie, a heavy bludgeon to be used in whacking an enemy over the head. Ours were made by fastening heavy steel nuts on a stout stick of wood, a very businesslike contrivance. The fourth man, or bomb carrier, besides having a large supply of Mills grenades, had smoke bombs, to be used in smoking the Germans out of dugouts and later, if necessary, in covering our retreat, and also fumite bombs. The latter are very dangerous to handle. They contain a mixture of petrol and phosphorous and weigh three pounds each. On exploding they release a liquid fire which will burn through steel.

The fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth in line were called utility men. They were to take the places of any of the first four who might become casualties. In addition they carried two Stokes gun bombs each. These weigh nine pounds apiece, have six second fuses and can be used in wrecking dugouts. The ninth and tenth men were sappers, carrying slabs of gun-cotton and several hundred yards of instantaneous fuse. This explosive is used in demolishing machine gun emplacements and mine saps. The sappers were to lay their charges while we were at work in the trenches and explode them as soon as our party was far enough out on the return journey to be safe from this danger. In addition to these parties of ten there were three of us who carried bombs and had orders to keep near the three officers, to take the place of any one of them that might go down and meanwhile to use our own judgment about helping the jolly old party along. I was assigned one of the three.

In addition to the raiding party proper there was a relay call across No Man's Land at ten paces interval, making a chain to show us our way back, to assist the wounded and, in case of opportunity or necessity, to reinforce us. They were ordered not to leave their positions when we began to come back until the last man of our party had been accounted for. The final section of our entourage was composed of twelve stretcher bearers, who had been specially trained with us, so that they would be familiar with the trench section which we were to raid.

The Raid and Its Result.

There were two things which made it possible for our raiding party to get started across No Man's Land. One

There were two things which made it possible for our raiding party to get started across No Man's Land. One was the momentary quickening of the blood which follows a big and unaccustomed dose of rum, and the other was a sort of subconscious, mechanical confidence in our undertaking, which was a result of the scores of times we had gone through every prearranged movement in our practice duplicate German trenches behind our lines. Without either of those influences we simply could not have left the shelter and faced what was before us.

We Were Crawling About on All Fours.

An intensified bombardment from our guns began just as soon as we had climbed "over the top" and were lining up for the journey across. "Lining up" is not just a suitable term. We were crawling about on all fours just far enough out in No Man's Land to be under the edge of the German shell fire and taking what shelter we could in shell holes while our leaders picked the way to start across. The extra heavy bombardment had warned the Germans that something was about to happen. They sent up star shells and "S O S" signals until there was a glare over the torn earth like that which you see at the grand finish of a Pain's fireworks display, and meanwhile they sprayed No Man's Land with streams of machine gun fire. In the face of that we started.

It would be absurd to say that we were not frightened. Thinking men could not help but be afraid. If we were pallid, which undoubtedly we were, the black upon our faces hid it, but our fear struck voices were not disguised. They trembled and our teeth chattered.

We sneaked out single file, making our way from shell hole to shell hole, nearly all the time on all fours, crawling quickly over the flat places between this small shelter. The Germans had not sighted us, but they were squirting machine gun bullets all over the place promiscuously, like a man watering a lawn with a garden hose, and they were bound to get some of us. Behind me I heard cries of pain and groans, but it made little impression on my benumbed intelligence from the mere fact that whatever had happened had happened to one of the other sections of ten and not to my own. It seemed, some way or other, no affair to concern me. Then a man in front of me doubled up suddenly and rolled into a shell hole. That simply made me re-

else's business to pick that man. Next, according to the queer psychology of battle, I began to lose my sensation of fear and nervousness. I saw a second man go down. I gave my attention principally to a consideration of the irregularities of the man parapet ahead of us, picking the spot where we were to enter the trench. It seems silly to say it, but I seemed to get some sort of satisfaction out of the realization that we had lost the percentage which we ought to be expected to lose going over. It seemed, the rest of us were waiting until we should reach the next use of our undertaking. I heard conditions given, and I gave some myself. My voice was firm. It surprised me, and I felt almost calm. Our army had so torn up the German barbed wire that it gave us no trouble at all. I walked through it with only a few scratches. When we reached the low, dbag parapet of the enemy trench, I tossed in a few bombs and followed them right over as soon as they had landed. There wasn't a German in sight. They were all in their dugouts. We knew pretty well where every one was located, and we rushed for entrances with our bombs. Everything seemed to be going just as we expected it to go. Two Germans plumped into me as I was rounding a right angle with a bomb in my hand. They had their hands up, and each of us yelled: "Merdy, kamerad!" I passed them back, to be sent to the rear, and the man who received them gave me a chuckle and told them to be lively. The German trenches were practically just as we had expected to find them, according to our map. They were so nearly similar to the duplicate section in which we practiced that we had no trouble finding our way in them. I was just thinking that really the only tough part of the job remaining would be going back across No Man's Land when it seemed that the whole earth behind me rose in the air. For a moment I was stunned and half blinded by dirt blown into my face. When I was able to see I discovered that all behind me was a mass of churned earth and rock, with here and there a man shaking himself or lying out of it or lying still. Just two minutes after we went into the trench the Germans had exploded not one of them. And I've never met any of them yet. I know a boy who won the military cross in the battle of the Somme, and I saw him on his knees before his platoon commander, shamelessly crying he was a coward and begging to be left behind, just when the order to advance was given.

In this war in every offensive, big or small, the man who has been trained to throw a bomb thirty yards is busier and more important than the fellow with the modern rifle, which will shoot a mile and a half and make a hole through a house. In a good many surprising ways this war has carried us back to first principles. I remember a crusader's mace which I once saw in the British museum that would make a bang up knob kerrie, much better than the kind with which they arm our No. 4 men in a raiding section. It had a round iron head, with spikes all over it. I wonder that they haven't started a factory to turn them out.

Tricks of Bombing.

When the Canadians first introduced bombing the bombs were improvised out of mess tins, the fuses were cut according to the taste and judgment of the individual bomber, and just when the bomb would explode was more or less problematical. Frequently the Germans have tossed our bombs back into our trenches before they went off. That was dangerous and irritating. They can't do that with a Mills grenade or any of the improved factory made bombs, because the men know just how they are timed and are trained to know just how to throw them. Then the Germans used to work a little bomb trick of their own. They learned that our scouts and raiders were all anxious to get a German helmet as a souvenir. They'd put helmets on the ground in No Man's Land or in an advanced trench with bombs under them. In several cases men looking for souvenirs suddenly became mere memories themselves.

In several raids when bombing was new the Canadians worked a trick on the Germans with extensively fatal effect. They tossed bombs into the German trenches with six inch fuses attached. To the Germans they looked just like the other bombs we had been using, and, in fact, they were—all but the fuses. Instead of having failed to continue burning, as the Germans thought, those fuses had never been lighted. They were instantaneous fuses. The ignition spark will travel through an instantaneous fuse at the rate of thirty yards a second. A German would pick up one of these bombs, select the spot where he intended to blow up a few of us with our own ammunition and then light the fuse. After that there had to be a new man in his place. The bomb would explode instantly the long fuse was ignited.

The next day when I got up after this disastrous raid my bunkie said:

"Something sure raised h— with our calculations."

"As those automatic self-cocking revolvers did with a Kentucky wedding when some one made a remark reflecting on the bride," I replied.

Women Once Invalids

Now in Good Health Through Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Say it is Household Necessity. Doctor Called it a Miracle.

All women ought to know the wonderful effects of taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound even on those who seem hopelessly ill. Here are three actual cases:

Harrisburg, Penn.—"When I was single I suffered a great deal from female weakness because my work compelled me to stand all day. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for that and was made stronger by its use. After I was married I took the Compound again for a female trouble and after three months I passed what the doctor called a growth. He said it was a miracle that it came away as one generally goes under the knife to have them removed. I never want to be without your Compound in the house."—Mrs. FRANK KNOBL, 1642 Fulton St., Harrisburg, Penn.

Hardly Able to Move.

Albert Lea, Minn.—"For about a year I had sharp pains across my back and hips and was hardly able to move around the house. My head would ache and I was dizzy and had no appetite. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, I am feeling stronger than for years. I have a little boy eight months old and am doing my work all alone. I would not be without your remedies in the house as there are none like them."—Mrs. F. E. YOST, 611 Water St., Albert Lea, Minn.

Three Doctors Gave Her Up.

Pittsburg, Penn.—"Your medicine has helped me wonderfully. When I was a girl 18 years old I was always sickly and delicate and suffered from irregularities. Three doctors gave me up and said I would go into consumption. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and with the third bottle began to feel better. I soon became regular and I got strong and shortly after I was married. Now I have two nice stout healthy children and am able to work hard every day."—Mrs. CLEMENTINA DUERRING, 34 Gardner St., Troy Hill, Pittsburg, Penn.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice,—it will be confidential.

SETTLING OF NATIONALITY.

All Children Born in British Empire Are British.

Which country does a man belong to? That of his father, or that in which he was born? asks Answers. We know that an Englishwoman who marries a German becomes a German herself, but what of her children, or those of any other German born under the Union Jack.

At the present time this question is often discussed by people who, holding opposite opinions on the subject, sometimes express them with more force than logic. Those persons, for instance, who hold that you that these countries support on view as that Germany and Russia hold to the opposite.

England's position is, perhaps, somewhat different. It will be noticed that the two groups into which the nations of the world are divided by this question are, broadly, the autocratically-governed servile states such as Germany and Russia on the one hand, and the free, liberty-loving countries, like France and America on the other. It is but natural, therefore, that England, the home of freedom, should take her place among the latter.

A Place of Safety.

At a recent gathering, in the Guildhall, when Mr. Balfour was given an official welcome by the City of London, the following notice was on the program: "Should the proceedings be interrupted by the presence of hostile aircraft, of which ample notice will be given, it is suggested that the guests of the corporation should adjourn to the crypt beneath the Guildhall, or to the adjoining crypt under the Council Chamber, until the raid is over. The staircases on the north, south, and west sides of the Guildhall give access to these crypts, which are spacious, well lighted, and in direct communication with other parts of the building." There is something peculiarly precious about the "house agent-like" description of the crypts as "spacious and well lighted." Altogether most desirable palces, in fact. Three years ago, even the hint of the possibility of such an announcement would have been accounted a most extravagant flight of fancy.

An Athletic Dog.

Apocryph of the retirement of the master of the Tower Bridge, in London, some delightful stories are being told of his long tenure of office. One especially, of a dog owned by the superintendent of Billingsgate Market, is worth repeating. The dog, it appears, one day had a mind to cross the river to the Surrey side, and, as was usual with him on such occasions, he went by way of the Tower Bridge. Just as he reached the middle of the bridge, however, one of the huge bascules began to be raised, to allow of a boat passing up or down the river. It would have been quite simple for him to have turned back, but he knew all about tower bridges, so he just adjusted himself comfortably on the rising bascule, went up with it, came down with it, and then, as the two sides were meeting once again, leaped lightly across the gap, "and continued his journey without a bark."

Breakfast Under Water.

Admiral Colville has a good story to tell of a breakfast, eaten under water in the Dardanelles, which deserves to take its place among all other good breakfast-table stories and for all time. A submarine was proceeding up the Straits when the captain happened to notice through the periscope that a floating mine had attached itself to the rudder. He imparted the information to the lieutenant, and they agreed not to tell the crew but to have breakfast and consider what was best to be done. In twenty minutes a plan for removing the mine was matured. The plan succeeded.

Temperature of Earth.

The temperature of the earth appears to increase from the outer surface downwards at the rate of one degree Fahrenheit for every fifty or sixty feet, and at the relatively short distance of a very few miles the temperature must be exceedingly high.

marries a German becomes a German herself, but what of her children, or those of any other German born under the Union Jack.

At the present time this question is often discussed by people who, holding opposite opinions on the subject, sometimes express them with more force than logic. Those persons, for instance, who hold that you follow the nationality of your father are apt to argue on the lines of the old "cross-talk" comedian. "Do you mean to tell me," he says, "that if a cat walks into a fish shop and has kittens, those kittens will be bloaters?"

The theory, however, is not so simple as that. For if one is always of his father's nationality, it follows that the father is of the nationality of his father, and so on into the remote past, and as the inhabitants of Great Britain are very largely descended from Normans and Saxons and Danes—to mention only a few of the sources from which our race has sprung—it would follow that scarcely anyone would be entitled to call himself an Englishman if the rule held good.

Fortunately, however, it does not. A man's nationality depends upon the laws of the country in which he lives, but as different countries have different laws on the subject it is natural that there should be a good deal of confusion about the matter.

You hear it said sometimes that it is wrong that the sons of Germans living in this country should be allowed to fight in our army, for the German law is that they are Germans. Quite so, but our law says that they are not. The law—not only of Britain, but the whole British Empire—says that any child born within the dominions of King George is his lawful subject, and to object to such persons as Germans merely on account of their parentage is to place the German law above our own, which is hardly patriotic.

The object of the German law is clear enough. Germany has always wanted a large army, and has for long been losing many of her people through emigration, and she therefore says that these men and their sons, to no matter what quarter of the globe they go, are still Germans, and in time of war are bound to fight for Germany.

But Germany is by no means the only country in which this law obtains. It—or something like it—is in force in Russia, Austria, and, indeed, in nearly every country in Europe, with one most important exception—that of our neighbor and heroic ally, France. And beyond Europe, in the United States, Canada, of course, and in practically all the different States of South America, we find that children born in those countries, no matter whom their parents may have been, are recognized as subjects of the land in which they were born.

When you consider the question it is clear that it must be so of necessity, for all these are what we call new countries, whose populations are still largely composed of immigrants from the older nations of Europe, and if all their children were to be recognized as natives of the countries from which their parents had come the real natives of these States would in many cases form only a minority of the population.

Similarly, France—though Frenchmen do not emigrate in large numbers—has for long suffered from a decline in population, and consequently is eager to avail herself of all the persons born within her boundaries. So that it is just as much from motives of self-protection one hand, and the free, liberty-loving countries, like France and America, on the other. It is but natural, therefore, that England, the home of freedom, should take her place among the latter.

Detecting the Submarines.

A book on the urgent subject of submarine exploits has been written by Mr. Alfred Noyes, who has chosen as the title of the volume "Mystery Ships." The author has had experience of trawlers, drifters, motor-boats, and other craft, and, speaking of submarines being "mapped," he says:

"A submarine may enter the sea indeed, and even go to America. She may even do some damage within their lines. But if she does it her position is known, and if there be any future damage done it will probably have to be done by another submarine, for she has called up a thousand perils from every part of the compass to close upon her return journey."

"I have actually seen the course of a German submarine—what I thought itself undiscovered—marked from day to day on the charts of a British base. The clue to the ramifications of the work was held by a few men at the Admiralty in London. . . . It is to be conveyed in words the wise speed and subtle co-ordination of the naval hunting, for the beginning of any tale may be known only to an admiral in a London office, the name of it only to a commander at Killybegs, and the end of it only to a trawler skipper off the coast of Ireland."

Railway Company's Contribution.

The London and North-Western Railway Company has contributed 24,386 men to the colors; the London and South-Western, 4,796.

Food is Dearer.

Retail prices of food in the United Kingdom showed a rise of 1 per cent. during June, according to the Board of Trade Labor Gazette. Meat has increased from 3 to 5 per cent., but bacon and fish are lower, while the introduction of Government cheese caused a decline of 7 per cent. in the price of the commodity. Prices on June 30, 1917, are in average 28 per cent. dearer than on July 1, 1916. Compared with pre-war conditions, butchers' meat is double to treble the price of July, 1914, cheese more than double, tea 74 per cent. dearer, butter 65, and milk 69 per cent. dearer, in Australia 25 to 26 per cent. higher, in Canada 59 per cent. higher.

African Imports.

The total value of the exports of the Union of South Africa during the year ended December 31st, 1916, was £23,946,283, as compared with a total of £15,768,000 for the previous year.

Transmitting the Voice.

YES! LIFT A CORN OFF WITHOUT PAIN

Cincinnati authority tells how to lift a corn or callus so it lifts
off with fingers.

You corn-pestered men and women need suffer no longer. Wear the remedy that nearly killed you before, says Cincinnati authority, because drops of freezezone applied directly tender, aching corn or callus, stop pain at once and soon the hardened callus loosens so it is lifted out, root and all, without pain.

A small bottle of freezezone costs little at any drug store, but will quickly take off every hard corn or callus. This should be as it is inexpensive and is said to irritate the surrounding skin.

If your druggist hasn't any, tell him to get a small bottle from his wholesale drug house. It's fine stuff and acts like a charm.

PROHIBITION ANNIVERSARY

Mr. Newton Rowell upon request a statement on the first anniversary of Prohibition, said:—

"I am in receipt of the strongest testimony, from all parts of the province, of the great practical results which have resulted from the operation of the Ontario Temperance Act during the past year.

The results have been so satisfactory that large numbers of the people were opposed to the adoption of the measure, are now its warm supporters. Thousands of wives and children are better clothed, better fed, know more of the real meaning of 'home' to-day, than they ever before. Crime has been substantially reduced; the efficiency and power of the workers have been materially increased; business has been stimulated, rather than depressed; and the whole country is free from the constant menace of the open bar. It is evident that the bar now closed will never be reopened in this province.

Vigorous and impartial enforcement of the law must be maintained; the Act must be strengthened where necessary, to make it more effective and to carry out its intent.

Our grateful appreciation is due to the men and women all over the province, whose untiring and unselfish labors through the years, made possible this great measure of social reform."

Necessary Farm Equipment

MORE and more the Ford car is looked upon by progressive farmers as necessary farm equipment, the same as the plow, the hay-rake, the drill, the mower, the harrow and other labor and time-saving machinery.

A farmer with a Ford car can dispense with one or two of his horses and make the trips to town, railway station, creamery, or to the neighbours in one-third the time. In fact there is no farm machine made that will save the busy farmer and his busy wife so much valuable time as a Ford. And it's so easy to take care of—far easier than a horse. No bed to make, or hay and oats to get, no harnessing and unharnessing, and no stables to clean. The Ford practically takes care of itself.

Ask any farmer who owns a Ford if he would ever again try to get along without it. His answer will hasten your decision to own one.

Twelve Pittsburgh jurors, unable to agree otherwise on the amount of damages Miss Nettie M. Richardson should receive from Henry Denniston, a Swissvale recluse, for his failure to marry her, added the amounts believed she should have, divided the total by twelve and awarded her verdict never given in the courts failure to keep a promise to marry.

This application of arithmetic to the troubles of Mr. Denniston and the young woman was satisfactory to both and even he intimated he was willing to let the matter drop there, but the attorneys said the case would be appealed to a higher court, where perhaps the application of higher mathematics would give a different result.

Miss Richardson is forty years old. She formerly was a hotel clerk. Denniston is seventy-eight and credited with possessing $3,000,000. They are third cousins, if such a relationship may be figured. The cash in the Braddock National Bank testifies that Mr. Denniston had $400,000 cash on deposit there, and that was held to be sufficient evidence for the jury concerning his ability to pay a large sum.

Mr. Denniston never made love to Miss Richardson, she testified. He did not caress her, nor kiss her. It was a purely business understanding with him. On two of her calls at home she testified he had proposed that they be married, and that he would take care of him in his declining years, for which service he proposed to make a liberal allowance.

By the application of arithmetic in a similar way as in the Pittsburgh case, a Lennox and Addington jury arrived at a verdict in a Seed trial in our County Court a short time ago, and an outsider is led to wonder how many, if any, of the jurors thought the verdict in accordance with his own opinion as to what the damages should be. The decision was appealed from, but the Court of Appeal sustained it, and now the question naturally arises. Is not this system of applying mathematics to business of this kind a perfect fool of our much lauded jury system?

THE DIVINITY STUDENTS.

College Men Have Gone to the Front in Large Numbers.

"Divinity, Divinity, Divinity, Faith Hope and Charity. Long-tailed coats and poverty.—Amen." It is a college yell of one of our big Divinity schools, given more in jest than earnest, yet the yellers realize that the profession they have chosen is not highly lucrative.

When war was declared, and men's spirit of loyalty and sacrifice was challenged, many of these students volunteered. War did not come naturally to them, but by training they were fitted for it. As home missionaries, during their vacations, they had lived the life of pioneers. Few of them had not been frontiersmen. For the "Sky Pilots" are inherent warriors.

One is surprised at their selection of units. Every branch of the service has received them. Some became sappers, others became gunners or drivers, some signallers, others despatch riders, many are with the university companies of the "Pats," and others joined field ambulances, or the Y.M.C.A.

There they are, students from Pinehill, students from the United College at Montreal, students from Queen's, students from Wycliffe, Trinity, Victoria, Knox, McMaster, and students from the new Theological Schools in the West, where they seem to have enlisted en masse.

Some of the brightest and sweetest have fallen. Jack Lumsden enlisted from Victoria College in the first winter of the war. Crossing to France with the 5th Field Ambulance, he performed meritorious service at the dressing station. He was tender as a woman with the wounded, and by his words of cheer and comfort brought solace to many a dying comrade. Transferring to the Y.M.C.A., he became the secretary for the 4th Canadian Field Artillery. For a time he served the men from the ammunition column, but he found that he could do more effective work if he moved his headquarters farther forward. He sought a suitable centre in a ruined village of the dreaded Ypres salient. There is scarcely a whole wall in the village, but the Camp Commandant willingly gave him a battered house. He toiled all day of May 9th, 1916, gathering new stock and equipment. As evening fell, he took the load into the village and having deposited it, started to prepare a "Shake-down" for the night. The enemy started their evening hymn of hate, and the third shell went clean through the torn roof of the Y.M.C.A. There was no pain for Jack, as death was instantaneous. Thus passed one of our Divinity students, who could have, if he cared to do so, stayed back in comparative safety, but he chose to go forward.

There were two of Queen's most lovable Divinity students killed by the same shell in the same dug-out. Ed. Corkin, laughing Ed., who, by his winsomeness, had won the hearts of miners in the North Country and ranchers in the west. And Percy Caverhill, quieter than Ed., but one of the finest classical men in the university. Both went to France with the Queen's Battery, and displayed great devotion to their king, with an utter disregard of their own safety. In the Somme offensive, they moved the guns forward, and the new covering was very inadequate. The Germans were searching for their battery and a well-placed shell destroyed the dug-out where Ed. and Percy were

Or does one know of a finer life story than that of Harold Owen, who was studying at Wycliffe with the intention of going to the foreign field as a medical missionary? He went to Valcartier with the First Contingent as a lieutenant in the 7th Battalion. When the contingent was going overseas he found that as a supernumerary officer he would be left behind, so he relinquished his commission and went over as a private in the 3rd Field Ambulance. After Festubert, when the Seventh had lost most of its original officers, they desired him to retake his commission, which he did. Soon his daring and skill in reconnaissance came to the notice of his commander. He planned and executed with a party of men, the first "Trench Raid" that had ever taken place. After several months' splendid work as a scout officer, his party fell in with a German party many times their number while reconnoitering in "No Man's Land." Harold covered his men while they retired, but he fell a victim to the enemy fire. For his valor displayed on several occasions, he was recommended both for the V.C. and D.S.O., and we believe his father, Major Owen, who has been serving as a chaplain in France for the past two years, received some posthumous decoration.—Canadian Churchman.

After Half a Century.

After lying at the bottom of Lake Huron at a depth of 180 feet for over half a century, the sunken steamer Pewabic has been finally located by divers and work is now in progress to raise her $200,000 cargo of 300 tons of pure copper. This has been made possible by the invention of a special diving suit which withstands the terrific water pressure at so great a depth.

The divers state that the vessel is in fair condition with even her rigging and deck structure intact. They penetrated the vessel's cabin, on their first trip, and in it discovered a number of grinning skeletons, bleached white by their long submergence. They located a number of trinkets, which they sent to the surface. These included a silk dress, which, despite half a century below water, appeared almost as good as new when dried, while the crimson and gold coloring of some cotton goods retrieved was as bright as the day the material was purchased. There is specie yet to be found valued at $40,000.

The salvaging of this cargo will open the road to the accumulation of a fortune by members of the salvage company. Along the jaws of the Sawtooth Reef in Lake Superior alone lie scores of sunken cargo craft, laden to the scuppers with copper. The wrecks of the past half century in Lake Huron too, can be made to yield millions in gold.

Uiam Avery Bishop, a Canadian, and a member of the Royal Flying Corps, in attacking a German aerodrome single-handed, has been rewarded by the bestowal upon him of the Victoria Cross, the most prized of the British valor medals. The Official Gazette gives the following resume of the action which brought Captain Bishop the Victoria Cross:

"Captain Bishop flew first to an enemy aerodrome. Finding no enemy machine about, he flew to another aerodrome three miles distant and about twelve miles inside the German lines. Seven machines, some with their engines running, were on the ground. He attacked these from a height of 50 feet, killing one of the mechanics.

"One of the machines got off the ground, but Captain Bishop, at a height of 60 feet, fired 15 rounds into it at close range and it crashed to the ground. A second machine got off the ground, into which he fired 30 rounds at 150 yards. It fell into a tree. Two more machines rose from the aerodrome, one of which he engaged at a height of 1,000 feet, sending it crashing to the ground. He then emptied a whole drum of cartridges into the fourth hostile machine and flew back to his station.

"Four hostile scouts were 1,900 feet above him, for a mile during his return journey, but they would not attack. His machine was badly shot about by machine-gun fire from the ground."

Captain Bishop is a native of Owen Sound, a son of W. A. Bishop, Grey County court clerk and registrar of the Surrogate Court. At the outbreak of the war he was a student at the Royal Military College, Kingston, and he went overseas shortly after the outbreak of hostilities with an engineering corps from Kingston. He was home on furlough some time ago, having been slightly injured in an aeroplane accident.

Frequent reference has been made in recent war despatches to an aviator "from a Northern Ontario town" who was making a name for himself at the front, and it is now apparent that Captain Bishop was the officer referred to. He is said to have the knack of unnerving his opponent at once by diving straight at him as a hawk strikes at his prey.

Six weeks ago his father received reliable information to the effect that his son had destroyed 36 German aircraft. Captain Bishop, who is but 23 years of age, already holds the Distinguished Conduct Order and the Military Cross. Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig referred to his most recent exploit in his despatches and endorsed it as "remarkably clever work."

Captain Bishop's brother, Major Worth Bishop, is on the headquarters staff at London, Ont.

An Intrepid Marine.

An intrepid but almost forgotten Canadian mariner was Captain J. H. Gardiner, who left Shelbourne, N. S., on June 19, 1893, in an effort to cross the Atlantic in a fifteen-foot sailboat of his own make.

Captain Gardiner was last heard of about eight hundred miles east of New York, when Captain Crowley, of the British steamship Verejean, picked him up and outfitted his boat with supplies.

Captain Gardiner insisted on continuing his solitary journey across the ocean, although he said that he had had hard luck in the journey out of Shelbourne. He was bound for Falmouth. He said that he was trying that method of crossing the ocean in an effort "to make a name for himself."

OUR OTTAWA LETTER

The great Conservative party which claims to number in its ranks all the good sports, all the thoroughbreds, all the hearty fellows who refuse to do certain things because it "isn't cricket", have been engaged in putting through Parliament a Franchise Act which kicks the other contender in the ankle, strews tacks on the track and then tells him to go in and run the race.

For some reason or other the Borden Government wants to win the next election. Whether by hook or crook—but mostly by crook—it has set out to win. Why it wants to win is a mystery. It is not because it has made a record for good government. The Ross Rifle, the paper shoes, the spavined horses, the fuse scandals, the profiteering by Sir Joseph Flavelle and other of its cold storage friends, all say no to that. It must be that the country hasn't been bled white enough yet. There must still be a few dollars in this distracted land for the looters to get. The goose hasn't reached its limit of golden eggs. Being a goose it goes on laying. When it quits laying the high cost of living will quit too, and the Borden Government and its friends will be willing to quit also, satisfied, that there is nothing left worth taking.

Another reason why the Borden Government may wish to remain in is to see the C.N.R. deal through. The C.N.R. deal, not to put too fine a point on it, is a deal to take over an insolvent railway, which the people of Canada own already, and give Mackenzie and Mann and a band of Toronto pirates sixty million dollars for a block of six hundred thousand shares of watered stock which is worth considerably less than nothing. Financial institutions with which Sir Joseph Flavelle is connected, and whose man Finance Minister White is said to be, are intimately connected with this deal. Most of the plans revolve around E. R. Wood, another planet in the Flavelle system. In fact, a C.N.R. train can't run off the track without spilling Mr. Wood out of Sir William's private car.

The Borden Government wants to remain in to see this highly important C.N.R. deal through. The loose ends can't be gathered up until after the next general election. Hence these desperate attempts of a rotten government to remain unburied for a few years longer. Meanwhile there is a big campaign fund in the C.N.R. deal as soon as it gets past Parliament, but the Borden Government must earn the money by stoking around long enough to get it past the arbitrators who are to be called upon to value the worthless stock. A deal like that requires a lot of guidance.

There are many ways by which the Borden Government can linger superfluous on the stage for some time to come. The extension lapses this coming October, but a Government that wants to wait and see may very well string things along till next spring by one trick or another. If money gives out, that is to say if the appropriations voted by Parliament are exhausted, the Government can manage on orders-in-council, governor-general's warrants, and other constitutional subterfuges. It will be a dead government of course, and it will stink up the face of the earth against the will of the people, but it will serve. Yes, it is like Mercurio's wound—it will serve. At the very shortest it aims to hang on till next January and then murder Sir Wilfrid Laurier with a winter campaign.

After these good sportsmen have done their damndest to dodge consequences until next January or later, they have one last card up their sleeve. The franchise is not only a means of delay, because, if a new voters' lists and new voters' lists imply plenty of time in which to compile them, but it may also be a means under Providence—a long way under—of re-electing the Borden Government if it can be so handled as to let everybody vote but the Liberals. The excuse that will be offered for a new franchise is that the Canadian Parliament is the only assembly of similar size and dignity in the world that lacks a franchise of its own.

Up to the present the Canadian Parliament has got along fairly well by making use of the franchises employed to elect the provincial legislatures. But the Borden Government wants to change all that because seven out of nine of the provincial legislatures are now in the hands of the Liberals. Consequently the Borden Government wants a special franchise that will hand-pick public opinion in its favor, if such a thing is possible.

The outrage to freedom is so flagrant that even the Borden Government is constrained to announce that it is merely a war-time franchise for it promises never to do it again if the people will only elect it this once. After that it will allow Canada to be

they have been given the vote but are not yet on the lists and are consequently not available for the next election. Under these circumstances most fair minded people would say "If you must have a Franchise Act of your own which will bring the suffrage up to date, give everybody a vote, men and women alike, and let it go at that."

But this does not suit the Borden Government's book. It is taking no chances with women who might vote the way their Liberal husbands or brothers or fathers, or sweethearts, tell them, not to mention the other women who might vote against the Borden Government on its record of graft and its alliance with the high cost of living in the shape of Sir Joseph Flavelle and others of his kidney. The plain truth is that the Borden Government's Franchise Act disfranchises thousands more women than it enfranchises, but that will not prevent the vote-stealers from making a big holler about enlarging the boundaries of freedom and taking another stride along the road of equal rights. Listen to the mocking bird!

Space lacks here to describe the disfranchising clauses of the Franchise Act—the ban put on loyal citizens of alien birth, also on conscientious objectors. These will be taken up in another article. Suffice it to say that the disfranchising clauses are as much in line with the Borden Government's idea of fair play as anything else they have done.

WE'RE WITH YOU BROTHER.

(Wheatley Journal.)

The Windsor Record tells of a Puce farmer who sold 2,000 bushels of wheat at $2.20 a bushel and then asks: "Who spoke about hard times on the farm?" That $4,500 for which the farmer worked hard and paid high prices for labor to grow and harvest the wheat does not amount to a drop in the bucket to what some of the wheat profiteers raked in last fall. Don't envy the farmer his hard-earned dollars. A better policy would be to get after the profiteers who made millions out of wheat and never lifted a sheaf.

MONTREAL ALDERMAN

WOULD LEAVE HANNA.

Montreal, Sept. 18.—"I shall resign from my position as representative of this city on the advisory board to the Food Controller unless something is done immediately to control prices, as well as to control the consumption of certain articles of food," said Ald. Weldon yesterday. "My post is a purely honorary one, and I wish it to be honorable as well. I accepted it in the hopes of being useful to my fellow citizens and my country."

"The food control should at once become a benefit to the public and a measure of efficiency. The action that has been taken is entirely too slow and leisurely, and has produced no results. The public wishes prices as well as food consumption to be regulated."

if such a thing is possible. The outrage to freedom is so flagrant that even the Borden Government is constrained to announce that it is merely a war-time franchise for it promises never to do it again if the people will only elect it this once. After that it will allow Canada to be good again and get back to the old, honest franchise.

The first thing this courageous Borden Government proposes to do with its new Franchise Act is to skulk behind the skirt of a few women. The women who are to have the vote are the adult female relations—wives, mothers, daughters, sisters—of the soldiers, whether they are in Canada, in England or at the front. There are thirty thousand dead soldiers and their womenfolk are to have the vote too. The argument is that these men who fought and died for their country have every right to be represented by their female proxies at the next general election. And so they have. The men have done their bit by fighting for their country and the women have done their bit by giving up their men to do the fighting. But what about all the other women in Canada who have done their bit by helping the Red Cross, collecting funds, making comforts for the soldiers in the trenches, not to mention bearing the ills that the high cost of living, due to the Borden Government's profiteering friends, have imposed upon this country.

This hand-picked women vote may disappoint the Borden Government after all because the separation allowances have never been able to keep pace with Sir Joseph Flavelle's bacon and naturally some women may feel sore. But such as it is, it works out strangely enough. Take a case in point. Mr. F. B. Carvell's daughter is married to a soldier who is at the front. She will have a vote, but her mother, who is presumably as good a patriot, will not. Many similar complications could be cited. And what about a German or an Austrian woman who may be married to a soldier? Fearful though it is of aliens the Borden Government gives her a vote but excludes Canadian women who haven't the soldier relations necessary to give them a look in.

Lately some of the provinces have given women the vote on the same terms as men. Other provinces have gone in for a more restricted franchise for women. In some provinces the women voters are already on the list and have voted in elections. In other provinces, notably Ontario, that has been taken is entirely too slow and leisurely, and has produced no results. The public wishes prices as well as food consumption to be regulated.

WAR-TIME ELECTIONS ACT.

(Toronto Globe.)

Hundreds of thousands of women who have been engaged, at the sacrifice of time and money for the past three years, in rendering valuable service to the soldiers at the front feel deeply indignant at the slight put upon them and their work by the War-time Elections Act.

Even if the Premier's objection to granting the franchise to foreign-born women, owing to difficulties connected with varying methods of naturalization, were valid, that objection does not lie against women who are British citizens by nativity: They are so because they were born within the British Empire.

While the Bill was in progress through the House of Commons an amendment was moved to extend the franchise to such British women and it was voted down. These women will not take the deprivation with such absence of resentment as some people predict. They are quite as fit to be entrusted with the franchise as are those to whom it has been granted.

THE SENATE TREACHERY

(London Advertiser)

While the Liberals granted extension to the present Government and co-operated to advance the war legislation, the Government stabbed the Liberals in the back by filling up the Senate and commanding a partisan majority in the Upper House by means of its partisan strength in the Lower House.

Liberalism as a party owes nothing of respect of gratitude to the present rulership at Ottawa, which took Liberalism and wiped up the floors with it at every opportunity. Liberalism received nothing until the present Government was in straight. Then someone crooked a finger and said: "Come over here, I want to see you." Only a few have gone over, notably, Hugh Guthrie, who, unlike other conscriptionist Liberals, swallowed the present election bill and lined himself up definitely as a Conservative. Liberals have been slow to yield to the Ottawa Greeks who came bearing gifts. And well they should have been.

A Great Country.

The enthusiasm of the Canadian soldier for his own country—a land "flowing with milk and honey" gives the tone of his description—will assuredly result in a great tide of settlers from the Old Country after the close of the war. Who could fail to be impressed by the remark, made by way of encouragement to an English pal: "Don't worry, sonny. We can swamp this little island with grain. Why, on my farm, before I joined up, we stored the stuff in the open air. And when that was filled up we had to use the barns."

Poisoning Rabbits.

Poisoning by means of phosphorized grain is said to be an effective means of checking the increase of rabbits in certain parts of the Colonies.

SPOKE MANY TONGUES.

Upward of a Thousand Languages Among the Indians.

The bureau of American eth-ology
of the Smithsonian Institution,
which conducts studies and investigations among the Indians, is constantly bombarded with requests for
"the Indian word" for this and that.
It may be worth while to explain to the public, therefore, that there is no one American Indian language. On the contrary there are about 1,000
languages in the two Americas, and practically 500 distinct Indian languages north of Mexico. It becomes,
then, impossible to give "the" Indian word for any English equivalent, and consequently it is usually chosen from the language of the tribe which inhabits, or once inhabited, the particular section of the country from which the request comes; for example, the word may be chosen from the Sioux, Delaware, Cherokee, Seneca, Zuni, or other language.

One of the exhibits of the bureau
of American ethnology at the recent Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco was a large placard, in tabular form, intended to illustrate the number and variety of Indian languages north of Mexico. Although not exhaustive, it included 33 family groups and 167 different tribes. The equivalent of only one word was shown, the concept expressed by Latin homo, "human being." For example, a member of the Cherokee tribe says "yunwi," while his former neighbor of the Creek tribe, says
"isti." The Delaware of the Algon-quian says "in," for a male person,
and "lenno" or "lenape" for a human being. The eastern and central Eskimo use the word "inuit," meaning people, or "inuk," person, whereas his not far distant relative the Aleut, says "aliwut." The Zuni Indian expresses the word by "kwe," and the Osage by "nikashiga." These few examples show in how many ways, all different, this one idea is expressed. In fact, the Indian languages are so numerous and so difficult to record that the American anthropological association appointed a committee some time ago to devise a standard method for transcribing them. Its report has just been published by the Smithsonian Institution and is entitled "Phonetic Transcription of Indian Languages."
It goes into detail as to the best and most improved manner of recording
the many Indian languages of this continent in a form that is feasible
and easily understood. The report is intended primarily for philologists
and students of phonetics, and is designed to show what is necessary in order to record an Indian language properly.

Fortunately for the student of Indian linguistics, nearly all the tribal
and family languages may be classified into groups, so that it is not necessary for the philologists to learn each language; he studies the basic principles of the speech of a linguistic group, and following certain rules
and exceptions is able to comprehend
much of the speech of its several branches. He knows, according to Grimm's law evolved years ago by our old friend, the compiler of the fairy tales, that certain consonants
correspond in all related languages,
as for example, in German, the high German "das" becomes "dat" in low German; the s changing to t. The consonants l, n, and r are also readily interchangeable. Thus the scientist recognizes the same word despite its disguises. But it is not with a view of disguising or making his speech distinctive that an Indian of one

tribe but lack l and r; on the other hand
the Kiowa, Apache, Zuni, and Cherokee have l and n, but lack r. The Sioux call themselves by a name
meaning "allies," pronounced "Dakota" by those of the eastern or Santee division; "Nakota" by the middle or Yankton division, and "Lakota"
by the western or Teton division; the latter division comprises all the tribes west of Missouri or about two-thirds of the whole nation. This example shows the three methods of expressing one word by the members of a single family.

But besides these variances and many others there are the eccentricities
in speech of the individual, of the family proper, and of the camp
group, all of which intrude transient forms, just as in the English speech
of North America we find variations
between the speech of a northerner,
a westerner, and a southerner. The philologist has to beware all this,
and to sift and sort the languages to eliminate all such local and colloquial accents, for it must be remembered that the speech of the red man
is not a written language with a grammar and a dictionary, except those which his white friends have evolved for him. It is of interest and value to know and record these various aboriginal languages before they become extinct, and that is one part of the work of the bureau of American ethnology. In order to meet the popular demand for Indian names for postoffices, parks, villa sites, and outing organizations the bureau has lately compiled and issued a circular,
giving simplified forms in Osage,
Blackfoot, Delaware, Cheyenne, Cherokee, Seneca, Chippewa, and other Indian languages. Some of these names are especially interesting and musical in sound.

Regina's Public Utilities.

The auditor in a recent report to the Regina City Council, says that the city's three public utilities during the first five months of this year
had a balance of profit over operating expenses amounting to $18,- 918, or nearly $2,000 more than the estimated surplus for the entire year.
The electric light department showed a surplus for the period of $15,- 345, and the waterworks department
$7,745. Light and power taxes amounted to $14,375, and property
sales contributions to $8,573. The street railway department had a deficit for the five months of $27,124,
being about half the estimated loss
for the entire year. The city general expenditure for the first five months of the year amounted to $252,656, the estimated expenditure
for the whole year being $670,248.

The Welland Canal.

About $13,000,000 of the total estimated cost of $50,000,000 has been spent to date on the Welland Ship Canal. The work has been suspended on account of the war.

A revolver has been invented by a gunsmith in Brussels that shoots

An Old Story.

A correspondent of an English paper tells the following story, and but worth repeating. It concerns
two rival sausage makers. Again,
they lived on opposite sides of a certain street, and one day one of them
placed over his shop the legend, "We sell sausages to the gentry and nobility of the country." The next day, over the way, appeared the sign, "We sell sausages to the gentry and nobility of the whole country." Not to be outdone, the rival

ARE BUILDING SHIPS

NEW FIRMS SPRINGING UP IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Wooden and Steel Vessels Costing $27,000,000 Are Now Being Constructed on the Pacific Coast, and With the Industry Thriving Further Developments Are Planned in the Near Future.

A YEAR ago there was not a large ship being built in the Province of British Columbia, and the industry did not represent an output of much more than $50,000. To-day there are $27,000,000 worth of steel and wooden vessels under construction or contracted for on the Pacific coast.

While the shipbuilding industry of the Province is by no means new—wooden ships were built there as far back as 1788—its firm establishment as one of the chief assets of the west coast of Canada has taken place within the year. It is, of course, due to the ever-increasing demand for ocean tonnage.

The aid to shipping act, passed by the Conservative Government of British Columbia early in 1916, drew attention to the facilities available for shipbuilding, and soon afterwards contracts were placed for the construction of ten auxiliary power wooden schooners. This particular type of vessel costs about $150,000, and is similar to the motor sail ships that have been built in the Pacific States. They are 225 feet long, 44 feet in beam, and 32 feet deep. Boiler engines of 160 horsepower drive twin screws.

In order to assist communication between Eastern and Western Canada through the Panama Canal the Dominion Government decided to establish a line of vessels, and have already let contracts for two ships of the auxiliary schooner type. This started the activity, and contracts amounting to $18,000,000 had been let up to a few weeks ago. Since then announcement has been made by the Imperial Munitions Board of the letting of contracts for a further twenty-seven wooden steamers in this Province. The total program of construction now amounts to $27,000,000 in value.

Of the original ten auxiliary schooners six were to be built at the Wallace shipyards at North Vancouver and four at the Cameron-Genoa yards of Victoria. Also at the Wallace yards there were to be built three steel steamers of the "war dog" type, one of which has already been launched. These steel ships cost about $650,000 each.

At the Coughlan shipyards at Vancouver a program of construction involving $7,500,000 was embarked upon. It provided for the building of six steel steamers, one for Norwegian and five for British interests. They cost about $1,250,000 each. Three are now under construction.

Meanwhile the Cameron-Genoa yards secured further contracts, and at the present time have built or are building ten auxiliary schooners, Yarrow's, Ltd., at Esquimalt, one of the oldest of the shipyards in this Province, has secured contracts for four steel shallow-draught steamers for river navigation in India.

These were the principal of the older yards, but new firms sprang up and other shipyards were established. Heston & Leonard of South

WHEN MAN'S AT WAR.

Most Trying Time Is That Before a Charge "Over the Top."

Everybody wonders what are the sensations and emotions of the individual soldier as he waits in the front line trench for the order to charge and as he rushes across the death-swept zone toward the enemy. Does he think of the chance of death? Is he physically afraid? Does he shrink from the necessity of facing and inflicting death? Donald Hankey, the Englishman who wrote so frankly and interestingly of the soldier's experiences at the front in "A Student in Arms," considers this matter in one of the articles in the new volume, "A Student in Arms," Second Series. Mr. Hankey spent nearly the whole of two years at the front in the trenches and in the supporting lines, and was killed in action at the battle of the Somme. He says:

"The fact is that at the moment of a charge men are in an absolutely abnormal condition. Their emotions seem to be numbed. Noises, sights, and sensations which would ordinarily produce intense pity, horror, or dread have no effect upon them at all, and yet never was the mind clearer, the senses more acute. It is before an attack that a man is more liable to fear. Of all the hours of dismay that come to a soldier there are few more trying to the nerves than when he is sitting in a trench under heavy fire from high-explosive shells or bombs from trench mortars.

"You can watch these bombs lobbed up into the air. You see them slowly wobble down to earth there to explode with a terrific detonation that sets every nerve in your body a-jangling. You can do nothing. You cannot retaliate in any way. You simply have to sit tight and hope for the best. Some men joke and smile; but their mirth is forced. Some feign stoical indifference, and sit with a paper and a pipe, but as a rule their pipes are out and their reading a pretense. There are few men, indeed, whose hearts are not beating faster and whose nerves are not on edge.

"But you can't call this the fear of death. It is a purely physical reaction of danger and detonation. Personally, I believe that very few men indeed fear death. The vast majority experience a more or less violent physical shrinkage from the pain of death and wounds, especially when they are obliged to be physically inactive, and when they have nothing else to think about. But this is a purely physical reaction, which can be, and nearly always is, controlled by the mind. Last of all there is the repulsion and loathing for the whole business of war, with its bloody ruthlessness, its fiendish ingenuity, and its insensate cruelty that comes to a man after a battle, when the tortured and dismembered dead lie strewn about the trench, and the wounded groan from No-Man's Land.

"But neither is that the fear of death: It is a repulsion which breeds hot anger more often than cold fear, reckless hatred of life more often than abject clinging to it. The cases where any sort of fear, even for a moment, obtains the mastery of a man are very rare."

British Tars Still Peerless

SO earnestly are our eyes, our hearts, fixed on the Western front that we have little thought for the wonderful deeds that have been accomplished by British and Allied troops in other theatres of war. For instance, we hear little and then only at long intervals of what has been done and what is doing in Africa, where at one time there were probably half a dozen fronts, and half a dozen little wars raging simultaneously. To-day there is only one African front, only one German army at large, and this is now being attacked. That there is only one African battlefield to-day is due to the splendid heroism of British, Belgian, and Afrikaner expeditions that gradually rounded up and destroyed the various enemy bodies that were operating in different and widely-separated parts of the great continent. Some incidents that occurred in one of these little British expeditions are reported in the form of a diary by Commander G. Spicer Simson, of the British Naval Reserve, who headed the Tanganyika expedition in the fall and winter of 1915-1916.

His original task was to take two small British gunboats and their crews a distance of some 10,000 miles, place them on Lake Tanganyika and there assist the Belgians in wiping out the enemy, the Belgians apparently not having big enough boats for the job. He mentions that the small size of the British boats excited the jealousy of the Belgians when they first arrived, for it was not believed that they were big enough for the task ahead of them. It is regrettable that the tonnage of these two boats, Mimi and Toutou, was not given by Commander Simson, but he mentions incidentally that of the three German boats that dominated the lake before the arrival of the British expedition one of 600 tons blew herself up to escape being captured. Of the other two one was sunk and the other taken. It is obvious that the Mimi and Toutou were no motorboats. Nevertheless, after their ocean voyage, they were transported 200 miles through bush and forest, 400 miles by river, and again 100 miles by road. Probably when the history of the war is written this obscure little task performed by a handful of Englishmen assisted by negroes will stand out as one of its most wonderful achievements.

Commander Simson says that the conditions existing on the last stage of the overland trip were simply awful. He and his men had no water to drink; so they drank filthy mud. They had little sleep, and were worn out with the sun, dust, flies, and mosquitoes. The dust from the oxen and traction engines, in combination with a merciless sun, and then "sixteen days on the Luabala River in an open boat through a sleeping sickness country, infested with tsetse, was an experience none of us wishes to have again." At one moment, he says, he saw his boat sliding in loose earth towards a precipice, and at another with one wheel right down in an ant-bear hole. The road on which the final march was made was over a plateau 7,000 feet above sea-level, so soft that the wheels were buried, and

LEG WAS TORN OFF

But Brave Gunner Wanted to Keep Fighting.

During the recent visit of George to the battle field tales of heroism during the great land fight were told, of which following stands out pre-eminent. A heavy shell struck a turret of a super-dreadnought, crashed that was felt throughout the ship. It put every man of the crew out of action. The gun was least injured, but the leg was carried off. With the limping by a shred of flesh he rallied the dead and dying turret and continue the battle never felt his injury. As he was lying on the dying men to go their gun he was removed to a stretcher, and the fleet saved his heroic life, operating the turret alone. Of none men speak with more enthusiasm of their surgeons.

In another case a seaman died placidly throughout the attack, the turret roof cleaning the powder and gunshots as the German shrieked overhead, and as, at intervals, storms of splinters the armor. He bore a cruel life, and at the end showed no scratch. Yet, as a sub-lieutenant told us, the big shells passed continually over the ship. He was minded at one moment to see what the enemy was doing, and laboriously hoisted himself out of the man-hole at the top of the turret. Just as he came to a monstrous object passed it, a scream overhead, and he knew a big German shell. He died long his observations.

In another case an officer, a huge stoker—who weighs 170 lbs. and pulls like Hercules in the tug-of-war team—carry with a deep cut a foot long arm and bad burns from the explosion of a shell. Nor would he leave the turret to be bandaged till a doctor came, but he was given by his superior.

present have built or building ten auxiliary schooners, Yarrow's, Ltd., at Esquimalt, one of the oldest of the shipyards in this Province, has secured contracts for four steel shallow-draught steamers for river navigation in India.

These were the principal of the older yards, but new firms sprang up and other shipyards were established. Harrison & Lamond of South Vancouver are building one auxiliary power schooner, the British Pacific Engineering Company of Vancouver have a construction program of $1,500,000 and the Vancouver shipyards are building cannery tenders and other small boats.

This was the original program of construction up to the latest announcement by the Imperial Munitions Board, which added another $9,000,000 to the value of ship contracts in the Province. The Lyall Construction Company of Montreal then secured a controlling interest in one of the Wallace shipyards and will build six steamers there. For the purpose of establishing shipyards near New Westminster, the B. C. Construction Co. and the Westminster Marine Railway Co. amalgamated as the B. C. Construction & Engineering Co. They will build four of the new program of twenty-seven wooden steamers. Then the Cameron-Genoa shipyards at Victoria secured four contracts and the Pacific Construction Co. was formed to take over an old shipyard at Coquitlam and build two steamers.

In Vancouver another new firm came into being in the Western Canada Shipyards, Ltd., which is an association of Armstrong-Morrison & Co., Grant, Smith & Macdonnell, Ltd., the Northern Construction Company, and Palmer Brothers. They will build six steamers and have already commenced two of them.

Other yards either now existing or projected and which hope to secure contracts are: The British Columbia Marine, Ltd., Vancouver; the Prince Rupert Drydock & Engineering Company of Prince Rupert; the Sound Construction Company of Vancouver; the Taylor Engineering Works of Vancouver, and the Victoria Machinery Depot of Victoria.

There are plans for other new firms also, and there is every indication of still further developments in the very near future. It seems probable that new yards will be organized to build ships for sale in the open market instead of on contract.

Decline in Ostrich Industry.

As illustrating the decline which has taken place in the ostrich industry in South Africa it is interesting to note that, according to the results of an official census, the number of birds in the union has fallen from 746,657 and 776,268 in 1911 and 1913 respectively to 391,010 in 1916.

Foe Intrigue Fails.

Tons of seditious literature, printed in many languages and intended for circulation in neutral countries, have been seized in London and condemned by a prize court as part of a gigantic scheme on the part of the Germans to spread their propaganda to the four corners of the earth. The seizures were found in the mails of the steamships Oranje, Rembrandt and Goentoe. More than 1,500 bags containing thousands of pamphlets, were removed from the vessels by the British authorities.

Sir Frederick Smith, the Attorney-General, in asking the court to condemn the seizures, asserted that the scheme was on the largest possible scale and had been carried out with ingenuity and thoroughness. In a neat red and yellow cover, he said, was a pamphlet entitled "The Neutrality of Indian and England," and information available to the British authorities showed that in virtually every neutral town of importance, the Germans had appointed agents whose special mission it was to distribute the literature.

There were Dutch and French editions of this pamphlet, the French edition being edited, it was said, by the Indian National Party. An Arabic pamphlet had a flaming red star and crescent on the cover. Another dealt with alleged British atrocities.

A pamphlet in French and Spanish, entitled "England's Rule in India," was intended for circulation as far afield as Bolivia, it was said.

Botha Warns Traitors.

A grave warning against propaganda aiming at the political independence of South Africa has just been issued broadcast by General Botha. His statement follows:

"Members of the South African party must not allow themselves to be misled by false and misleading propaganda for independence. The proposal is now being made merely to win votes at the Provincial Council elections by an appeal to sentiment, and not to the sound sense of the people.

The proposal is wholly impracticable, and is moreover very dangerous, for in the present war conditions it can only lead to bitterness, division, race hatred, and even civil war.

There is in South Africa a strong English population whose Motherland is now engaged in a life and death struggle. It is not surprising that they regard this movement as treasonable and disloyal. It is unjust and dishonorable to make such an attempt at this moment, and the dishonor is all the greater as the proposal is only intended to catch votes for a particular party.

My warning is intended very earnestly, because I foresee in this movement nothing but ruin for South Africa and disastrous consequences for the South African people. I appeal above all to our pioneers and the fathers of our people to follow the safe way of honor, along which a great future awaits us."

A Heroic Sailor.

The log of the wireless operator of the British trawler Floandi, which was sunk in the Adriatic Sea when Austrian cruisers attacked a fleet of mine drifters, has been placed on exhibition in the London National War Museum. It contains the entry which the wireless operator, Douglas M. Harris, was making at the moment when he was killed by a shrapnel bullet. Harris had continued to send and receive messages while the trawler was being riddled by shells.

ness country, infested with tsetse, was an experience none of us wishes to have again." At one moment, he says, he saw his boat sliding in loose earth towards a precipice, and at another with one wheel right down in an ant-bear hole. The road on which the final march was made was over a plateau 7,000 feet above sea-level, so soft that the wheels were buried, and the gear had to be hauled out with block and tackle, oxen and negroes. The river journey was hardly less trying, since the boats had to be got aboard barges. When the outfit arrived finally, the Belgians said that the impossible had been accomplished.

The entry describing this part of the diary, which is published in the New York Times, closes with these words—and how many Englishmen have not said the same and made it good with their lives: "We have a very difficult task in front of us, but for the honor of our country, we are determined to give a good account of ourselves." They did. On December 27, 1915, the British boats engaged a German gunboat of five times their combined tonnage, and after an action of twelve minutes she struck her flag. The gunnery of the British boats must have been excellent, for the third shot from the Mimi hit the wireless and brought it down; the fifth shot hit her on the waterline and she fled, "but we were faster and put shell after shell into her." One of them went through the conning tower, killing the captain, a gunlayer, and a seaman. She was also leaking badly, and then she quit. When the British sailors boarded her they found that twelve of their shells had struck. She was yellow from lyddite, and the dead were unrecognizable. They were buried with military honors.

On February 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mimi and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Fifi. The latter was not fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mimi put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Fifi gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with unfleshed scalpel.

It is probable that an Anglian and his wife, a Halton, C. woman, will be the next Lord and Lady Mayoress of London. Mrs. Hanson was Miss Applegate, daughter of the late James A. J.P., of the County of Halifax, and one of the founder-early directors of the Bank of Montreal, and long one of the prominent men of the province.

Mr. and Mrs. Hanson have children, a son and a daughter. Her son is Captain C. E. B. Hanson, West Riding Regiment, and Lieutenant of the city of London. Her daughter is Mrs. Poole, the daughter of Frederick C. Poole, D.S.O., Artillery, a son of the late R. H. Poole, of Rainton County Ham, whom she married in 1908.

Mrs. Hanson, while always her place at public functions, never happier than when surrounded by her family and friends in her Cornish home. She has not been in Canada for years, but retains deepest interest in her birthland and welcomes Canadians to her in Wilton crescent, S. W., at country home, Fowey Hall, in Cornwall.

Dramatic Entertainments.

In England, during the last Ages, though no theatres were some forms of dramatic entertainment were extremely popular. They were carried on with much splendour of dresses and other properties of the fifteenth century almost one of the great guilds or societies acted some sort of mystery play, usually chosen with reference to the patron-saint of the guild. The theatres of the theatrical profession of some of these guilds still exist and in some cases the list includes the most gorgeous silk and damask and magnificent damask armor, altogether worth in money some thousands of pounds. The story of St. George rescuing the princess from the dragon was a favorite subject, the princess clad in the richest dress, adorned with real jewelry of high value. St. George wearing very costly elaborate armor. The dragon an immense monster made of lead and large enough to contain several men, who worked the various parts of its body.

WHY EGGS ARE DEARER

HAVE GAINED PLACE IN BRITISH MARKET.

Russia May Yet Offer Serious Competition, but Cutting Off of Britain's Usual Sources of Supply Has Given Extra Trade to This Country During the Three Years of the War.

ONE of the very obvious reasons why the price of eggs
has been increasingly high
in Canada since the outbreak of war three years ago is that instead of keeping all her eggs
at home, as was practically the case
in 1914, Canada has been exporting large consignments of eggs to England. Formerly Great Britain got fifty per cent. of her eggs from Russia, but that source of supply was almost completely cut off, and the void has been filled as far as possible
by eggs from Canada and the United States. To-day Canadian eggs occupy a strong position in the British market. The question which the Canadian Trade Commissioner in Liverpool now asks is whether or not Canada can hold her greatly extended
egg trade in the United Kingdom.

He points out that "during the years immediately preceding the outbreak of the war imports of Canadian eggs, which had formerly been well known on the British market,
fell to negligible quantities, the Board of Trade returns noting only 14,700 great hundreds (of 120 eggs)
in 1911, none at all in 1912, and 1,950 in 1913. Home requirements
had so greatly increased that Canada had become a large importer of eggs, and the total output was readily absorbed at satisfactory prices.
At the same time the increasing competition of continental sources of supply on the overseas market, favored, as they were, by steadily growing efficiency in organization for collecting, packing, grading, storing,
and marketing, lower production
costs, and by a natural advantage of geographical situation, had brought prices to a level that ceased to hold out special attractions to the shipper."

"The war had an immediate effect
upon these supplies, the total imports dropping from 21,579,950 great hundreds in 1913 to 17,804,805 in 1914, 10,246,926 in 1915, and 6,606,411 in 1916. Russian eggs, in particular, which had furnished over fifty percent. of the total in 1913, dropped from 11,453,277 great hundreds in 1913 to 6,970,827 in 1914, 3,074,156
in 1915, and 734,525 or eleven percent. of the total in 1916. This decrease in supplies from the continent resulted, naturally, in producing high prices and a strong demand for transatlantic eggs, and the greatly increased production of Canadian eggs has enabled our shippers to take full advantage of the situation. In 1914 Canadian egg imports into this country were 361,173 great hundreds, in 1915, 916,326, and in 1916
1,431,778.

"Considerable complaint was made of the pack of eggs sent forward in 1914, and the resulting condition in which the product reached the market. These initial disadvantages,
however, have been largely overcome
by the shippers, and at the present time Canadian eggs occupy a very satisfactory position in the eyes of

Not because the North American

there increasing interest and increasing haste in the work of pre-

ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

Reconstructed Belgian Army is Stronger Than Ever Before.

How different conditions are today on this western front, especially on that part occupied by the British,
from what was the case one year ago
can best be learned from a summary
of what is now taking place.

A year ago an advance on the Somme began which was a carefully planned and well executed campaign;
it was the greatest attempt that Britain had ever made under arms;
for the number of men under arms,
the number of men and guns taken,
and the tremendous artillery preparation beforehand were on a scale
never before dreamed of. Hopes were high, and, while results were not all that could be expected, the move was
a splendid training for field work,
and converted the English amateur soldiers into veterans who, during this present year, have shown themselves the superiors of the pick of the German troops.

To-day the fighting front extends
from the North Sea to St. Quentin, and British guns, outnumbering the German in the proportion of three to one, are throwing high explosives on nearly every mile of the 110-mile stretch. The supply of munitions is almost inexhaustible, and it has been possible to help out Italy and Russia

She has not visited in the city for years, but retains the keenest interest in her birthplace, and welcomes Canadians to her house in the Crescent, S. W., and her own home, Powey Hall, in Cornwall. She was educated at the S. College, Hamilton, Ont.

England, during the Middle Ages, though no theatres were built, forms of dramatic entertainment were extremely popular, and carried on with much splendour and other properties. In the fifteenth century almost every form of the great guilds or sacred fraternities acted some sort of miracle play, usually chosen with reference to the patron-saint of the guild. In the sixteenth century the theatrical properties of these guilds still exist, in some cases the list includes most gorgeous silk and gold masks and magnificent damasked costumes, altogether worth in modern value some thousands of pounds. The story of St. George rescuing the princess from the dragon was a very popular subject, the princess being in the richest dress, adorned with real jewelry of high value, and the dragon wearing very costly and elaborate armor. The dragon was a monstrous monster made of leather large enough to contain seven or eight men, who worked the various of its body.

"Considerable complaint was made of the pack of eggs sent forward in 1914, and the resulting condition in which the product reached the market. These initial disadvantages, however, have been largely overcome by the shippers, and at the present time Canadian eggs occupy a very satisfactory position in the eyes of the trade. They are very attractively packed, clean, and of the desired color, of good size and weight, and, while they must necessarily rank below Danish and Irish fresh eggs, they are generally superior to all but the best grades of Russian eggs, especially as regards size and appearance. They always command a premium of from one to two shillings per case over American eggs."

The Canadian Commissioner predicts that "the principal competition in the future will come from Russia. Danish eggs, while an important factor on the market, furnishing twenty per cent. of total imports in 1913, are largely sold as fresh eggs, bringing top prices, and they may be regarded as in a class by themselves. They are, moreover, largely distributed from London. Danish eggs are very carefully graded as to weight and size, the various selections weighing 13 pounds, 14 pounds, 15 pounds, 16 pounds, 17 pounds, 18 pounds, etc., per 120, while Canadian eggs practically all weigh from 14 to 15 pounds per 120. Irish eggs rank somewhat lower than Danish, are sold mainly as fresh eggs, and always command excellent prices. Egyptian eggs furnish five per cent. of total imports in 1913. They are usually of good quality and pack, but they are very small, not much larger than pullets' eggs, and are always sold at a discount on account of their size. Their season also is different from that of Canadian storage eggs. They are usually on the market from the beginning of January to the end of April, while Canadian and Russian storage eggs both sell, principally, from October to December. Egyptian pre-war transportation costs were 4s per case of 120 dozen from Alexandria to Liverpool or Hull.

"The Canadian packing is reported to be highly appreciated by the Liverpool trade. The thin cases formerly used gave much dissatisfaction on account of their liability to breakages, but most shippers have now replaced these by heavier cases which come through, generally, in very satisfactory condition. In this respect, they contrast favorably with American packs, which still reach the market, to a considerable extent, in cases too frail to give adequate protection to their contents. There is also favorable comment on the leaving of spaces between the slats for ventilation, a matter that was formerly neglected to the detriment of the product. Another point emphasized by dealers consulted was the superiority of the strong, white, odorless fillers, now extensively used, over the flimsy brown strawboard ones, formerly much in evidence. Apart from other considerations, the white filler promotes sales by adding considerably to the attractiveness of the packing."

The Russian method of packing eggs, it is explained, consists largely in reducing costs to a minimum. A case six feet long by two feet in width is used, and it contains 1,440 eggs, as compared with the Canadian thirty-dozen case. "In order to meet Russian competition after

of American aborigines, beginning with the Hopi, from studies as nearly accurate as are at this time possible.

The Apaches, a tribe of unsavory reputation, but far from being as bad as painted, have been chosen for the second group. Because of the difficulty experienced by the white settlers of the Southwest in living peaceably with them, or near them, and because of the difficulty the Washington Government experienced in subduing them, they came to be regarded as a very troublesome people. It cannot be said, however, that they presented a greater problem than the White River Utes, the Modocs, the Sioux, and other tribes that could not, while game was available to them on the plains or in the mountain passes, be tempted by the reservation and the settlers' stores. The reputation of the Apaches for lawlessness, at all events, crossed the ocean, and Paris long since applied their name to the most dangerous criminal class in the city.

It seems to be quite certain that the Apaches were corrupted by early association with unscrupulous whites. When the Spaniards first came in contact with them, they were tractable and friendly. Always nomadic in their habits, they followed the trail afoot up to the coming of the paleface. The Spaniards appealed to their friendship by giving them the first horses that American Indians ever rode. Mounted, they proved to be excellent hunters. Later, their horsemanship, and the firearms for which also they were indebted to the white brother, proved to be formidable factors in prolonging race war over a wide district.

They had many fearless chiefs, among them Black Hawk, not, however, the one of the memorable Black Hawk War, who became an implacable enemy of the whites; and the famous Geronimo, who displayed not only surpassing bravery, but a high order of military genius. Geronimo was finally captured by General Miles, and the loss of this leader broke the spirit of the tribe. Nearly all the well-known Indian fighters and scouts of the last half of the nineteenth century participated, at one time or another, in campaigns against the Apaches.

As one result of the numerous expeditions against the Apaches, the Government collected a vast amount of material bearing upon the habits and customs of the tribe. A great many collections of Apache arms and utensils also were made, most of which found their way in private hands or public museums.

As already remarked, it is not too late, even now, to witness representatives of many American Indian tribes living in all the primitiveness of the fifteenth century, but their number is every year decreasing. Even the "blanket" Indian is becoming rare in districts where he once was commonplace. It is high time the museums were gathering in all they can find appertaining to the aboriginal American, for the prospects are that his descendants will soon be living as ordinarily as other civilized people.

A Little Commonwealth.

In Dorsetshire, England, there has been established a "Republic" called the "Little Commonwealth," which has its own coinage and which is used as a reformatory for youngsters from two years of age upward. The experiment has proved a success. The children sent down there from metropolitan police courts to reform earned eight to nine cents an hour, out of which they paid $2.75 a week for board and lodgings. The republic has been recognized by the home office as a certified reformatory.

the German troops.

To-day the fighting front extends from the North Sea to St. Quentin, and British guns, outnumbering the German in the proportion of three to one, are throwing high explosives on nearly every mile of the 110-mile stretch. The supply of munitions is almost inexhaustible, and it has been possible to help out Italy and Russia with guns and shell.

Last year the Germans could mass sufficient forces on the western front to hold the British advance; to-day they are being slowly but surely driven back after most desperate efforts to avert the danger. The German man power is no longer what it was and this is shown each day in increasing signs. Possibly the number of men in the field is as great as ever, but the spirit of the troops is no longer the same. Victory seems by no means as certain for them, and this change of view is not so much due to hunger and want as to the successive checks to German arms and the continued pressure and increasing numbers of their opponents.

One great surprise—and a fact not generally known—is that the Belgian army has been entirely reorganized and is to-day larger in numbers, better equipped and more determined in spirit than ever before. It should be remembered that this army in 1914, not 100,000 strong, met the Germans, who had three times the numbers, and held in check for thirteen days the great invasion that had been under preparation for years, with the expectation that it would be irresistible. To-day the army occupies a front of twenty-two miles with several divisions of infantry, cavalry, and artillery.

Humor of the Trench.

From the trenches on the western front comes the story of a soldier's narrow escape from death and the levity displayed by a comrade, illustrating how viewpoints change when men get on the firing line.

Private Mac of an Alberta regiment had a pious upbringing in his early home in Scotland, and his religious inclinations did not desert him when his family settled on a farm in western Canada. All through the war he has carried "Spurgeon's Sermons" in his breast pocket, and occasionally he does some preaching, with his comrades in arms as the congregation.

Private G of the same regiment lacked the upbringing and the book of sermons, but possesses a sense of humor. The two were in a group resting and smoking when a shot from a German sniper hit Private Mac in the breast, the bullet being deflected by the book.

Fearing that Mac was about to improve the occasion, G "beat him to it" and in a fair imitation of his friend's best preaching manner started in:

"Oh, dear friends, what a blessed thing it was that our dear brother wasn't a reading of his book of sermons—as he ought to have been—instead of engaging in worldly conversation with sinful soldier men. For if dear Brother Mac had been a reading of his book of sermons, where, oh, where, my dear friends, would Brother Mac (priceless old thing) have been then?"

There is a Bible written on palm leaves in Göttingen University.

INSECT POULTRY PESTS.

Remedy For the Numerous Species of Lice That Infest Fowls.

Of the numerous species of lice in the United States seven are commonly found on chickens, four or five on pigeons, two or three each on geese and ducks, three on turkeys and several each on guinea fowl and peafowl. Lice have a flattened form and are fitted with spines and peculiarly modified legs, which assist them in moving about through the feathers. Certain species which remain on the larger feathers have a very narrow elongated form, which enables them to find protection in the grooves between the barbs of the feathers. Lice are not fitted for sucking blood. They feed on portions of the feathers or on the scales in the skin, but their presence in any considerable numbers is responsible for serious injury.

The seven different species of lice found on hens are spoken of as body lice, head lice and feather lice, according to the places in which they usually are found, but since the different species intermingle to a considerable extent it is not possible to separate them absolutely on this basis. Usually three or more species are to be found on one fowl.

The head louse is undoubtedly the most injurious species to young chickens. It is a dark gray species, nearly one-tenth of an inch in length. The body louse is found on the skin of the fowl rather than on the feathers. It is rather large, straw yellow in color with some dark spots, due to food within the digestive tract. It is probably the most injurious species on grown chickens, but it also infests young fowls. The shaft louse is the species spoken of by most writers as "small body louse," a name which does not fit the habits of the species. Nor-

DAIRYING AND SOIL CULTURE

DISEASES OF COWS.

Bloat or Hoven is Most Often Caused by Eating Wet Clover.

Bloat in cattle is also known as hoven, or tympanites. It is characterized by a filling up of the left flank and by the formation of gas, writes G. H. Conn, D. V. M., in Kimball's Dairy Farmer. It is brought about by a wide variety of conditions, but chiefly by eating spoiled feed or feed that is wet with dew or rain, or it may result from eating too fast, which produces indigestion, with a rapid fermentation and formation of gas. It may also result from choke, due to the closing of the gullet, which prevents the belching of the gas, and consequently the retention of gas causes the bloating. It may also result from the eating of frozen roots or grass or vegetables, such as turnips, cabbage, and the like. It is caused most often from eating clover which is wet with dew or rain and in many cases is fatal before the animal is found.

The swelling in the left flank becomes so great that it sometimes extends above the level of the back.

BABY BONDS.

Hildegard Hawthorne of the V. I. C. Tells About the War Loan.

The French nation has set its face definitely against any premature peace because of one tremendous reason: that the children now growing up must not have in their turn to meet the agonies of war.

This is a war more to make them free forever from war than anything else.

"I wish I could do something, something, mother," said a little whom I know, "to help America. you think I could be a boy scout if I'm only eleven? And why twelve why can't I go on a destroyer and chase submarines?"

It was funny, of course. But not funny to see the glow of his vision on that child's face, to feel his whole being was thrilled with desire of service. It was inspiring. To turn aside that passion to do something for the country whose history he was studying school, a country that to him was more of a real object to be loved to many of the older persons whose interests had harrowed to their ownness and their own struggles, to turn aside something vital and precious.

This boy was one of five children. Each child had something saved, the result of self denials and ambitions. Each got certain sums weekly chores performed or in prizes for conduct. And all were eager for something.

So we talked to them about the war loan, explained how the country needed money to help it in the

rather than on the feathers. It is rather large, straw yellow in color with some dark spots, due to food within the digestive tract. It is probably the most injurious species on grown chickens, but it also infests young fowls. The shaft louse is the species spoken of by most writers as "small body louse," a name which does not fit the habits of the species. Normally it occurs along the shaft of the feathers and does not remain on the body of the host for any length of time. It resembles the large body louse somewhat, but is smaller, rather lighter yellow in color and somewhat less spiny. Although this species is probably the most common found on chickens, it is considered of less importance than the large body louse, chiefly because it stays on the feathers the greater part of the time and probably feeds exclusively on the barbs of the feathers and on scales along the shaft. It is not known to occur on young chickens. The wing louse, which is closely related to the head louse, is dark gray and has an elongated body. It is more slender, however, and rather darker in color. Three other species are found more or less commonly on chickens. These are the fluff louse, the large hen louse and the brown chicken louse.

Among the four species found on turkeys is the common body louse of chickens. The shaft louse of chickens also infests turkeys, but probably does not breed on that host. The other two species seem to be native to the turkey, probably existing on this fowl in the wild stage. The large turkey louse probably is most abundant. It occurs on the feathers on various parts of the body, especially on the neck and breast. The slender turkey louse is a species of good size, though rather elongated, and resembles in shape the head louse of chickens. Normally neither of these species is excessively abundant, but on crippled or unthrifty turkeys they may cause serious annoyance, and undoubtedly they are injurious to poults.

While considerable numbers of lice are found on domestic geese and ducks, they seldom become sufficiently numerous to cause noticeable injury. Dusting the fowls with sodium fluorid will rid them of all lice.

Swat the Rooster.

Hens without the presence of the males will lay more eggs, will be in better plumage, moult better, be better content and lay eggs that will infinitely keep better. In fact, the latter is the great reason for this campaign against the rooster, for without him eggs will be sterile or infertile. Now, infertile or sterile eggs stand heat much better—in fact, under the influence of any temperature, henhouses, depot platform, freight car en route or corner grocery. Above 90 degrees, if the egg is a fertile egg, the germ is quickened or life started. Later this dies, and there is a spotted egg.

Lime For Poultry.

If your poultry range is gravelly or has gravelly areas the birds can pick up enough lime for shell and bone making, but if it is clayey it is well to supply grit and pounded oyster shells the year around. A pound of coarsely ground oyster shell is said to contain enough lime for about seven dozen eggs.

zen roots or grass or vegetables, such as turnips, cabbage, and the like. It is caused most often from eating clover which is wet with dew or rain and in many cases is fatal before the animal is found.

The swelling in the left flank becomes so great that it sometimes extends above the level of the back. Breathing becomes fast and difficult. The eyes have an anxious and painful expression. As bloating continues the animal shows symptoms of great pain and may reel and stagger when it walks. Death is caused from the pressing forward of the diaphragm upon the lungs, which results in asphyxiation.

If the animal is in immediate danger it should be tapped immediately. If it is not possible to procure immediately a trocar, which is made especially for tapping, use a sharp butcher or pocket knife. Do not attempt to procure antiseptics and sterilize the spot where the incision is to be made if the cow is in immediate danger. The animal should be tapped midway between the last rib and the point of the hip and about the same distance from the backbone. When the animal is not in immediate danger a rope gag is made by tying knots in a rope and placing this bunch of knots in the mouth and passing the ends of the rope up over the head, where they are tied. The animal by chewing the knots in an effort to dislodge them will cause the secretion of saliva with swallowing. The gas will then pass off by way of the gullet or esophagus.

There are several anti-ferments that are good for the treatment of bloat in preventing the formation of the gas. From two to four tablespoonfuls of spirits of turpentine given in one-half pint of linseed oil or in milk will sometimes be all that is required. Possibly the best treatment is one-half tablespoonful of formalin in one quart of water as a drench. This treatment has been credited to workers at the Kentucky State Agricultural college.

See That Collars Fit.

Farm horses usually begin the spring's work in good condition and during the early spring and summer shrink rapidly in weight. Collars fit all right at the start, but soon the necks are smaller and the collars are loose, and if the weather is hot shoulder trouble begins. Then the "sweat" pad is put in to fill out the collar to fit the neck, which it does not do at all. The draft against the neck remains unchanged, and the poor horse goes ahead pushing against a collar that does not hug close to the neck. A good teamster will look to the collar adjustment every morning before he leaves the stable.

The Dairy Cow.

Give the dairy cow sufficient care and feed for best results and handle her products in the most sanitary way necessary for production of best human food.

Improve the Dairy Herd.

Weed out the poor producer cow. Use a pure bred sire. Save all calves from best producing cows.

we talked to them about the libman, explained how the country money to help it in the great work which they were as yet too small to share in, but which the money they might give could do its full share in making successful.

"If each one of you puts in $10 you can buy one bond. You will have a liberty bond, and you will be really helping your country. If you earn money by work and by being good and give that money into the keeping of America you will be working for her just as much as though you were fighting in the trenches or sinking submarines."

All I say is, try it with your children. Use that beautiful young enthusiasm in a definite way. Let your child own a liberty bond and tell him or her just what owning it means. Let him grow up with a stake in his country's credit, let him feel himself a part of the tremendous whole.

This war is for the sake of the children. The child can help to win it if you use his generous wish to help his country and teach him that there really is work he can do. Even if he earns only a few pennies and you have to make up the rest he will be doing his best. He will be learning the lesson of patriotism and of service and co-operation and thrift. Let him own a liberty bond.

THE ARTFUL DONKEY.

Once upon a time there lived in a field near a fine jungle where many lions made their home a little gray donkey.

Now, this donkey was not satisfied with being just a donkey and drawing his master's little cart of vegetables to market and enjoying a comfortable home and nice meals.

Neddy wanted to be a lion, and he tried to imitate the air and walk of a lion he had once seen. He fancied that his bray sounded like a lion's roar. All the farmyard animals laughed at him, which made him very cross.

One day a hunter who had shot a lion stopped at his master's house with the lion skin. While the stranger was at dinner Neddy stole out to where the skin lay and slipped into it. Then he ran off toward the forest, frightening foolish hens and geese and amazing the more sensible animals.

When he reached the edge of the fields he met the old black sheep who led his master's flocks.

"G-r-r-u-u!" brayed the donkey.

The sheep laughed.

Near the woods he met Mr. Fox.

"Why, it's that stupid old donkey that brays whenever I come about the farmhouse at night. What's he doing running around in the skin of old Leo?" Mr. Fox said to himself.

Leo was the old lion which had been shot by the hunter. His relatives in the forest were very angry about his death.

"G-r-r-u-u!" brayed the donkey.

"Ah, good evening, Mr. Leo!" the fox said slyly.

The donkey was greatly pleased. "Glad to meet you, sir," replied the donkey.

"There are some of your relations over there looking for you," the fox went on, thinking that the donkey would turn and run home.

But the foolish donkey was so sure that the lions would gladly welcome him and never suspect that he was not one of themselves that he went trotting off toward a brook where some of the animals were drinking.

"There he comes, the monster, dressed in my poor, dear husband's skin!" roared Mrs. Leo, and she made a leap that landed her on the donkey's neck.

That was all. The next day the farmer, who went out to hunt for Neddy, found the lion's skin behind the donkey's skin in the woods.

ORGANIZATION OF THE RESOURCES COMMITTEE.

During the past week twenty-five ladies have willingly and tirelessly canvassed the entire town with the Food Service cards issued by the Food Controller. With the exception of not more than a dozen, Napanee's thirty housewives responded with alacrity to the appeal for conservation of beef, bacon and wheat, and voluntarily promised that there would be no more waste.

The following ladies acted as Captains:—Mesdames W. S. Herrington, Cottle, J. W. Robinson, Travers, Vrooman, J. L. Boyes, A. W. Grange, W. A. Grange, Hooper, Madole, E. Wilson, Corkhill, Pringle, Costigan, Creighton, Howard, McGurn, N. Miller, F. H. Carson, Fuller and Misses A. Thompson, E. Richardson, Vanalstine, Baker.

The Captains and their helpers, and the Presidents of all the Woman's Organizations in town are members of the Auxiliary. The next meeting will be in the Council Chamber, Friday, Sept. 21st, at 3 p.m.

BOUGHT NEW AUTO

Mr. J. W. Turner, of Studebaker Corporation of Canada, delivered this week to Mr. G. A. Blewett, Napanee, one of their beautiful six-cylinder touring cars. It made its appearance on our streets on Tuesday and Wednesday and is admitted by all who have seen it to be a masterpiece.

While attending Toronto Exhibition Mr. Blewett made a careful investigation of all the some eighty-seven makes of cars on show there, eliminating all in favor of Studebaker on account of its comparatively low price, its standard beauty, comfortable upholstery, elegant finish and general sturdy simplicity. So enthused has Mr. Blewett become over his new car that he has made a contract with the Studebaker Corporation for the sale of their cars in this district and he will be delighted to display their merits to anyone desiring information. Mr. Blewett was the guest with some one hundred and fifty eastern Canada Studebaker Dealers at their Annual Good Fellowship Banquet in Toronto, where a 100 per cent. increase of business for the past year was announced.

Bark for Tanners.

Considerable quantities of the bark of the South African wattle-tree have been imported into the United Kingdom from Natal in recent years, but most of it prior to the war was exported to Germany and Belgium. Since then wattle-bark has been utilized to a far greater extent by tanners in this country.

Straw Hats.

The straw-hat trade of Luton and Dunstable and other places in the neighborhood depends upon the fact that the straw used for plaiting is grown on adjacent chalk land. The plant has great affinity for the silica in the chalk and flints, and uses it for coating the outside of the stalk with its beautiful glass-pipe covering.

Women's Patriotic Service and Red Cross Work

Through the "U. E. Loyalist" Chapter, I.O.D.E.

We beg to acknowledge with many
thanks a generous donation of chewing gum for our soldiers, parcels from Mrs. W. A. Steacy. Several ladies have also already handed in generous sums to help with these parcels, to whom our sincere thanks are herewith expressed.

We would again remind all relatives and friends of the men overseas, that they should forward at once the correct addresses to Mrs. R. G. H.
Travers, the Convenor for this work;
as we learn that all Christmas parcels for our fighting men, must be ready to leave Canada by the first week in October, in order to ensure their arrival at the proper time "over there"! Do not delay in regard to this matter, and thereby cause disappointment to those dear to you over the water! We also desire to express our very appreciative thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Marshall C. Pogart,
for a most welcome donation of $10-00 to the Col. Arthur McCreer Fund, and feel very grateful for this generosity. It is expected that this Fund will soon be forwarded to Lt.-Col.
McCreer, as with the advancing season and cold weather approaching,
the same can be most usefully employed.

We should like to remind our members and workers that our work-meeting on Thursday lasts until 5.30 o'clock! This arrangement enables
those of our friends who wish to come
in warmly for a cup of tea and a

PLEDGE CARD CANVAS.

As was anticipated the ladies interested in the anti-waste campaign
did their work thoroughly and met with gratifying success. After all the people as a whole seem to have their hearts in the right place. There were very few in the whole town who refused to take the pledge. Some by round-about arguments maintained
that they could not, for instance,
give up their daily ration of meat,
but the whole argument when boiled
down was a humiliating confession
that Sir Stomach was master of the household and Patriotism had to take second place until his demands were satisfied. There were others, not many yet a few, who knew that food
of all kinds was plentiful and that this scare about a possible famine
was all nonsense. With this species of ignorance it is difficult to deal.
When people deny what is clear and manifest to any ordinary intelligence
there is not much use in trying to reason with them. There were some too, who perhaps ashamed of the real reason for refusing to take the pledge,
flatly refused and wanted to discuss
politics or some other foolish subject or maintained a discreet silence. Upon the whole the canvass was very successful and the people of Napanee
are to be congratulated upon the almost unanimous response to the appeal of the Food Controller. It is quite possible that in arranging the districts for the different canvassers
that some who live on the side streets
have been overlooked. If there be any such the committee would be pleased to have them apply to the nearest canvasser or to Mrs. J. W.
Robinson, chairman of the committee
and pledge cards will be gladly furnished.

aged 55 years, 8 months, 8 days.

KEECH—At North Fredericksburgh,
on Friday, Sept. 14th, 1917, Nelson
Keech, aged 82 years, 7 months.

A tribute to Mrs. Silas Storrington (nee Hannah M. Deline) who departed this life, Sept. 18th, 1907.

Weddings, and their yearly anniversaries,
Bring some token of pleasures in
past days;
But here, we mourn the loss of a loving mother,
'Tis ten years since she passed
away.

Dear mother, as the years go by
We miss you all the more;
We were all very young to see you
die,
And it was the application of a lifetime sore.
We fancy your presence making our
home happy,
Children's dreams were never half so
fair;

But Oh, to that lone awakening,
Dearest mother, I can no thing compare.
If I could know—could only know
Beyond the creed and feeble prayers
they say;
All the superb teaching she would on
us bestow,
While she lives with God to an endless day.
Those who think we've forgotten our mother,
When from this earth she soared
away;
We cannot find here just such another
If for many years on this earth we stay.

THE DAUGHTERS.

McGreer, as with the advancing sea-
son and cold weather approaching,
the same can be most usefully employed.

We should like to remind our members and workers that our work-met-
ing on Thursday lasts until 5.30
o'clock! This arrangement enables
those of our friends who wish to come
in merely for a cup of tea and a little chat at 5 o'clock to do so without embarrassment either to themselves or their hostesses, by coming into a room nearly devoid of its former occupants, and with the tea
equipment almost packed for removal. Therefore please do not be in quite so much hurry "to shake the dust of the work-room from your feet."
